

What a terminally ill person does NOT want

- ✦ Sympathy
- ✦ Exclusion from discussions
- ✦ Over protection
- ✦ Being nagged
- ✦ Being fussed over

Appreciated are:
“Good friends —
someone with whom you
dare to be yourself”

The Gift Of Friendship

FRIENDSHIP is a PRICELESS GIFT that cannot be bought or sold, But its value is far greater than a mountain of gold.

For gold is cold and lifeless, it can neither see nor hear, And in a time of trouble it is powerless to cheer.

It has no ears to listen, no heart to understand, It cannot bring you comfort or reach out a helping hand.

So when you ask God for a Gift, be thankful if HE sends Not diamonds, pearls or riches, but the love of real true friends.

The Dying Person's Bill of Rights

I have the right to be treated as a living human being until I die.

I have the right to maintain a sense of hopefulness however changing its focus may be.

I have the right to be cared for by those who can maintain a sense of hopefulness however changing this might be.

I have the right to express my feelings and emotions about my approaching death in my own way.

I have the right to participate in decisions concerning my care.

I have the right to expect continuing medical and nursing attention even though "cure" goals must be changed to "comfort" goals.

I have the right not to die alone.

I have the right to be free from pain.

I have the right to have my questions answered honestly.

I have the right not to be deceived.

I have the right to have help from and for my family in accepting my death.

I have the right to die in peace and dignity.

I have the right to retain my individuality and not be judged for my decisions which may be contrary to beliefs of others.

I have the right to discuss and enlarge my religious and/or spiritual experience whatever these may mean to others.

I have the right to expect that the sanctity of the human body will be respected after death.

I have the right to be cared for by caring, sensitive, knowledgeable people who will attempt to understand my needs and will be able to gain some satisfaction in helping me face my death.

People with a terminal illness were asked what they wanted.

What We Really Need Is Someone Who Will:

LISTEN -

Carefully to everything
Being unconditional and non-judgemental as an equal

Allowing us to talk freely
Without too much comment
Without giving advice – unless asked.

Asking about feelings;
Reflecting back our fears, anxieties, anger etc.
Allowing repeats

Prepared to be a 'punching bag' to let go at
Have good body language, without distractions.

COMFORT -

Giving strength and genuine caring
With honesty and empathy,
And give physical comfort as well - touch.

Be SENSITIVE -

Knowing when to listen
When to talk – and when not to.

Sometimes just being still – together,
Waiting, patiently allowing
Us to raise the topic of conversation

When and if we choose to;
Aware of body language.

Be TOLERANT -

Understanding, open – and responsive
Free to express feelings also.

And when listening, will concentrate
Have good eye contact

Allowing us to 'let go' in our own time
Of fear, anger, helplessness
Resentment, suppression, confusion etc.
Without being uncomfortable.
